Safer Fucking

* Use a latex condom ("rubbers", "bags") with lots of water-based lube. Lubes containing a sperm-killing chemical called nonoxynol-9 kill HIV in case the condom breaks. But lubes with nonoxynol-9 should only be used with a latex condom, never instead of one. Natural membrane condoms, also called "skins" (kile Fourrex), won't protect you. They have tiny, microscopic holes in them that HIV can pass through.

* Crisco, hand lotions, baby oil or Vaseline can cause latex condoms to break in minutes. Stick with water-based lubes, like KY and ForPlay.

* For extra protection, you may want to pull out before coming, or wear two rubbers. Some guys say two rubbers increases sensitivity.

* Whether you're on top or bottom, use condoms: HIV can infect the fucker as well as the fuckee.

I spent this past summer as a youth outreach worker for Access - The AIDS Committee of Sudbury. I talked about, read about and probably most of all, thought about AIDS all summer long. I met people who had AIDS, people who were HIV positive and some who had recently lost someone to AIDS.

Warning: Sex May be Hazardous To Your Health

Seriously, it was a tough haul, but didn't even COM-PARE to the summer before. From May to August 1992 I spent my time worrying and agonizing over my friend Dave, who was in the hospital with AIDS related illnesses (lymphoma, liver disease, you name it). Finally the worry and concern over him all ended, as he died in early August. Then came all the real shit and if you've ever had anyone close to you die, you know what the real shit is. If you haven't, quick knock on wood.

People in Northern Ontario tend to believe that they aren't at risk for AIDS or HIV. They think that a smaller community isn't susceptible to the big mean ills of epicenters like Montreal or Toronto. Let me dispel that myth with one word: Wrong. When I graduated high school in Toronto in 1988 I didn't know a hell of a lot about HIV or AIDS, but I learned fast, as my friends kept coming up positive. By the time I made it up to Sudbury, Felt like a tired old AIDS wife. I became rejuvenated

HOW TO USE A CONDOM

1. Place the condom against the head of the erect penis, leaving some space at the tip for cum. We suggest using a dab of water-based lubricant inside the tip of the condom.

condoms and USE them. They'll protect you from HIV as well as a host of really crappy STD's and even pregnancy.

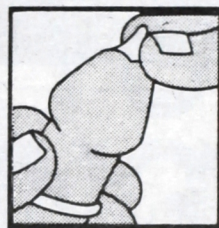

Seriously folks - I've seen what AIDS does. It invites a slew of opportunistic diseases that you never once I realized how much a lot of people up here still need to know.

The one thing, above all else, that people need to know is simply this: AIDS sucks. Do all that you can to avoid it. If you shoot up - don't share your needles. This means steroids, as well as your average illicit street drug. The best way to avoid contracting HIV through intercourse is by abstaining. If you do have sex, try to stick with one partner, and if that's impossible, make sure you're protected.

Carry latex condoms and USE them. They'll protect you from HIV as well as a host of really crappy STD's and even pregnancy.

2. Hold on to the tip of the condom and unroll it completely to the base of the penis. If the penis is uncut, pull back the foreskin before putting on the condom.

want to have; ones that will kill you. AIDS does not discriminate. It doesn't care if you're black, white, brown, red, green, straight, gay or bisexual.

Facts You Should Know

Women Unite, Take Back the Night

Cathy Murphy
Contributor

Assault against women occurs all too often and in many different forms. On Thursday September 23, Sudbury women came together in an evening called "Women Unite, Take Back the Night." The demonstration was a peaceful, symbolic one beginning with a rally at 7:00pm at the Steelworkers Hall on 92 Frood Road. Here, women gathered together as sisters, to share experiences and support.

A mixture of emotion flooded the room as women told their stories to the crowd and their reasons for being present. Many were angry at the violence against women that occurs everyday, however, many were pleased with the turnout of over 400 people and optimistic about the future of women's rights.

At 8:00pm women took to the streets in a march that lasted until 9:15pm and took them through some of the worst downtown areas in Sudbury.

Chanting out "Yes means yes, no means no, however we dress, wherever we go." and carrying signs that read, "Safety shouldn't have to be in numbers" and "Battered but not beaten", women gained support from the many passersby who honked horns and cheered them on. "It's sad that violence against women is so prevalent that marches are even necessary," said Barbara Stewart, one of the many women participating in the march.

Many Laurentian students also supported the march for many reasons. "Women should come together, it's okay to be angry, we have to work together for change," said Chrissy Staddon.

Student Jodie Russell also added, "It's time women stood up for who we are, we have every right to take back the night. We are people and we don't deserve to be abused."

Women and Children Only

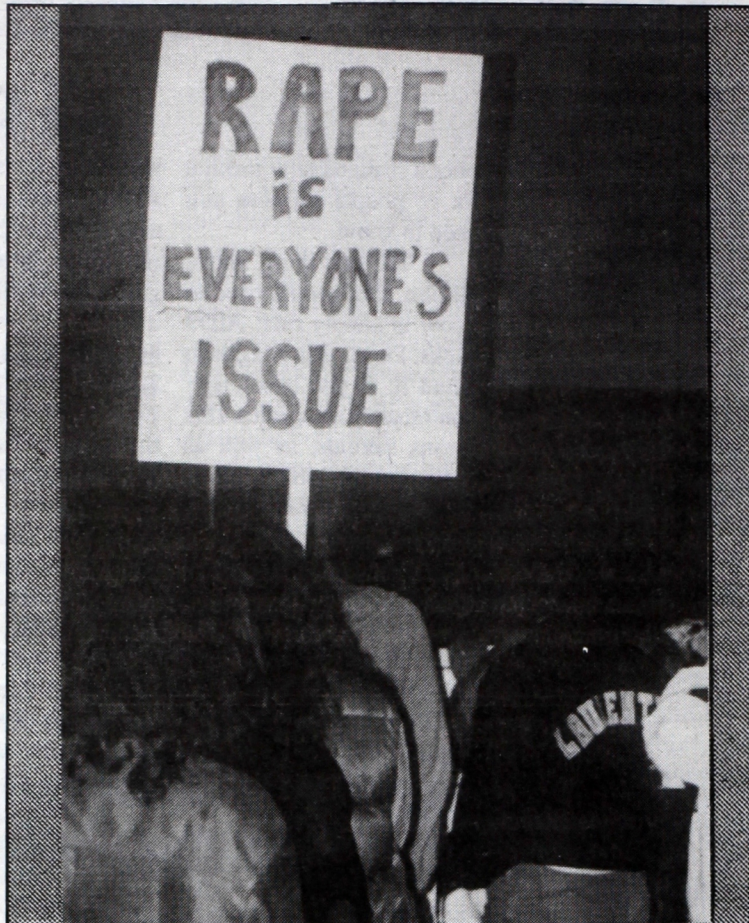

The 14th annual "Take Back the Night" walk was held last Thursday night, commencing with a rally at the Steel Workers Hall on Frood St. I was there, not only to take pictures, but to support what I thought was the spirit of the event.

I was under the impression that the idea behind the now traditional walk was to send a message to all the twisted members of our society, that decent people deserve the right to walk the city streets without fear of being raped, harassed, or assaulted. And so, though I was expecting it, I was still disappointed to hear the M.C.'s announcement before the walk began. "To all the men among us, I would like to thank you for supporting us, but the walk will be for women and children only." So there it was.

Over the past century, countries have gone to war to fight for world freedom, and until recently, it was the men of society who represented these nations. Through a long and involved struggle, women have fought for, and won, the right to fight along side of these men. Now a different war is going on, and the same women whose cries were heard at rallies for equality within the armed forces, have taken to the streets along to march for inner city freedom. Not only were the men not invited, they were not welcome.

Before beginning the walk, an open forum was established in order to end off the rally with some spirited words. One by one, women came up to share their stories and tell why they were marching that night. There are some stories that were not told, however, and I would like to share them with you.

After the rally, I joined some friends at one of the local establishments, and it was here that I ran into a member at the Y where I work. Sitting at the bar, glass in hand, this young man was sporting a black eye and a very swollen jaw. I didn't know him all that well, but curiosity overcame me and I asked how he had arrived at his present state. The young man took his drink in his hand, raised it up have been a while because they knew I had been at the march with Jenn. They didn't say much, but in between the kicks and the punches, I heard stuff like, "He must be a fag if he's going to women's rallies." and, "Who says the streets aren't safe anyway?"

They didn't do too much damage I guess. The eye will go down in a couple of days and ribs should be alright soon. I've gotten tagged a lot worse on the field."

The young man didn't report this to the police, and the damage done to his body wasn't worth going to the hospital over, but there are those who weren't quite as lucky.

I was getting some things together Friday afternoon when a friend of mine from L.O.C.S. called. "Sorry I didn't make it out with you guys last night. My grandfather was in the hospital, so I went to stay with him. He was on his way to the corner store last night to get some bread and a lottery ticket and someone jumped him. They must have been after cash, because they cleaned out his wallet and left his watch. What really sucks is that he went through all that over a lousy five bucks."

to his lips, took a couple of sips, and then he told me this story:

"I went down to that walk for the women to be safe in the streets tonight. My girlfriend is really into that stuff. I stuck around for the big meeting and even waited 'till they had finished their march so that I could walk her home. She had some work to do, so I dropped her off and started home.

I don't know how long they had been following me, but it must

The old man will be alright. Once his leg heals, he'll certainly be able to walk without too much pain. The question is, when and where will he want to walk.

But these are only stories, and couldn't happen. The streets are safe men. It is only the women and children who need to fear. It is only the women and children who need to take back the night.

Generation X?

Heigh ho, Kermit the frog—Oops! Wrong channel..

Welcome to another fun-filled installment of your favourite Lambda feature(?). I would like to offer an apology for last week's inane trash, but I was having problems. We all do, and I know I will be forgiven. Onward.

I've finally received some feedback, (oh joy!) and in this article, I'll try to address some of the issues.

I was asked whether or not I had borrowed the ideas in the article. Not intentionally. I have never read Douglas Coupland—he's the author of a book called Generation X, if you're interested—but I intend to. I am in fact, loaning the book from the very man who questioned me.

(Thanx!) In reality, I got the idea for this article from a CBC radio show I heard part of while I was visiting friends in southern Ontario. It was, appropriately enough, about the individuals interviewed in the show. The first group decried authority and all previous generations, blaming them for the terrible situation the world is in today. While those in power are not blameless, I disagree with the idea that they are totally culpable. They did the best that they knew, believed, or could do. I can't but doubt that my own actions would have been less than exemplary if I'd had to make the same decision

The other group interviewed realized the futility of blame, but did not dismiss the importance of the questions, that's why that came to mind. They refused to give in to depression and remain stubbornly, but not ridiculously optimistic. These people are the ones who make it to university and beyond, determined to make a place for themselves in the brave new world we find ourselves in. After listening to this show, I wondered, how to help the youth of the first groups, how to give them hope? I'm still struggling with that one, but I had the silly notion that this article would do.

Another fact that was brought up to me was that Generation X was written about a group of individuals that are now in their late twenties, maybe even their early thirties. What has that to do with us? Let's put it this way, I believe that Generation X is not a book, or a radio show, Billy Idol's band, or even a generation label; in my mind, it's a phenomenon, and one that is quickly encompassing, not one or two, but all generations now interacting with this world.

When it comes down to it, however, Generation X, the article, has become a sounding board for my own fears. How selfish of me! You people are idiots; you can see bullshit and know it for what it is. You know AIDS kills and life's a bitch, but you don't need to have it thrown in your face repeatedly. I was talking about laying the myth of Generation X to rest, and here I am perpetuating it.

So what do I do now? It was suggested that I rename my column Generation Y. ? Why Not? (NOT!) In the immortal words of Mr. Horse, "No, I don't like it." What about "The World and I" or "Modern Problems?" Again, we find ourselves with cheesy, overused labels as a substitute for a title. It needs to capture your attention, but "Sex" has been used too often. The artist writhes in her own indecision, a blankness stretching out before her that threatens not Nirvana or damnation, but a kind of insanity that can be either ... Eureka! I Think I have it! Starting next week, watch for FLUSH!

Before I leave you this week, however, I would like to say that I sincerely believe that knowledge is power, so take advantage of the University while you're here. Learn about it and learn about yourself. I was being genuine when I recommended that you check out the Student Counseling and Resource Centre, the Placement Centre, (did you know the SGA exec. gets paid more than I make in a good summer and that they are allowed to take a half course load while they are in office? Shit! Elect me .. elect ME!) and of course, it never hurts to voice your opinions. This institution is, after all, supposed to be here for us, am I not correct?

Until next time, mull this over; writing is thinking (or, if you come from a traditionally oral culture, speaking is thinking). So write or speak, but remember it's your thoughts that count, not how well you can bullshit.

Walkhome Program

by Heather Bishop
VP External/Acting President SGA

The Walkhome Service has not only become a valuable service on campus, it has for some people become a necessity. For those new students who are not familiar with the service, I'll fill you in a little. Basically the Walkhome Service is your piece of mind. Should you find yourself anywhere on campus alone, you simply call the Walkhome and two students come to escort you there safely.

Safety is not something that should be taken for granted. Don't let yourself believe the stereotypes, and don't adopt the attitude that "It can't happen to me". It can. To anyone.

The Walkhome Service is in trouble this year. Funding has been cut! Surprise surprise. The service will not be cut. Laurentian is one of very few schools who operates the walkhome program as paid positions. For example, Carleton has a volunteer core of over 800 students. 800!!! that participate in the program for free. Certainly there are students attending Laurentian that are committed enough to the safety of their peers to donate 4-5 hours a week of their time.

I know you are out there. I also know that you all need jobs, and would prefer if this was a paying job. I would love to pay you. However, as of right now, it's just not possible. So I send out a plea to all of you. Both on and off campus. Please come forward and volunteer a few hours of your time to help keep the program alive. It is something we cannot afford to give up. The safety of Laurentian students should not and will not be compromised. Drop off resumes/applications in the SGA office any time. In the meantime, if you are somewhere and you don't feel safe, call Security at 673-6562 during the day and 673-2661 after hours. There are Security phones located across campus to be used for emergencies only. Anywhere you see a Blue light, you have a direct line to security. Please use these phones for emergencies only. Please don't van-dalize these lights or phones, it could mean the difference between someone getting desperately needed help or being assaulted.

For any further information, contact Heather either in person or at ext. 1062. Get involved, make a difference. PLEASE.

Story Time

by The Prisoner of Reality

Let's take a different route this week, kids. I want to introduce you to an unknown Canadian bestselling author. If you're from Toronto or have been downtown between Bloor and Queen, you've seen him, Crad Kilodney. You know, the guy quietly standing there wearing a sandwich board. He seems quite harmless, until you actually read what's written on the board. "Stories For Demented Hockey Players", "Tales Appealing to Degenerate Anarchists", you get the idea. Of course, I was attracted to this man's side like a moth to the proverbial flame. He's very quiet, softspoken polite; but read a short story and you'll get a different view of the man. One such book, published by Charnel House, is "Junior Brain Tumors in Action". A compilation, titles include "Jumping Rubber Maggot Time" and "The Great Vomito". A short excerpt of the first story concerns Grungeo and his son Smeg, taking a walk and seeing a weirdo standing on the sidewalk. Grungeo is so confused "even his intestines paused for a moment in their digestion of the fried horse's anus he and Smeg had enjoyed at the Roller Games Arena." Great Stuff!! It's amazing. What's also amazing is that Kilodney is a bestselling author. He has sold more than 50,000 copies of his work, all on the streets of T.O. The industry will not recognize his popularity so he keeps plugging away, selling his stuff on the streets. His booklets range in price from $4 to $12 and are not recommended as dinner reading. For more info, come by the Lambda office and we'll give you the address of Charnel House. They might even write back if you ask nicely. 'Nuff said!

The Amiable Librarian

This column is based on questions asked of the Amiable Librarian. If you have a question, why not fill out a sheet near the entrance to the J.N. Desmarais Library or better yet, come into the library and seek the Amiable Librarian out.

Question: I am new here. What's the fastest way of finding out how the library works?

Reply: Believe it or not, this is not a potted question. The Amiable Librarian is getting it every day now. The simple answer: Drop into a library workshop. This coming week (20-24 Sept.), you can take a tour of the library or learn about the on-line catalogue in one of these 50 minute sessions. In later weeks if you want to bone up on periodical articles or public documents as well as figure out how to use CDs and the Internet then turn up for workshops on these topics as well. The workshops are offered in both languages and at a variety of times so there should be a place for you. By the way, there is no limit to the number of workshops you can come to. A copy of the complete schedule of workshops is available for you to pick up near the Amiable Librarian sign at the entrance of the Library. As Ross Perot says, "It's that simple".

Question: Where can I find a dictionary? I found the English-Sanskrit dictionary, the English to Yiddish dictionary, even the dictionary of carclno-gens. What I need is a plain ordinary Oxford English Dictionary for quick reference.

Reply: The Amiable Librarian is mystified why you are having problems. If you check out the on-line catalogue under Titles (Oxford English Dictionary), you should be able to find the volume you want. Alternatively, if you didn't care whether you got Oxford or not, you could find a dictionary by checking the Subject, looking under the heading ENGLISH LANGUAGE—DICTIONARIES. You might also be interested to know that you can always get a dictionary working on the third floor of the library by going to the Public Documents information desk and there is even one in the stacks waiting to be borrowed — an OED no less.

Question: Perhaps I am in error, but it seems that a disproportionate amount of French books are being bought, especially in the sciences. A lot of newer books (1990+) are French while we English are stuck reading outdated science texts. That spells academic doom.

Reply: The Amiable Library suspects that francophone students would not agree with you especially in the sciences and engineering where very few French texts are even available to be purchased. In fact, the library's acquisitions budget reflects the relative proportion of anglophones to francophones at the university, with the result that more books in English are bought.

Question: Students should not be allowed to sleep in chairs in the magazine section. These chairs could be put to better use. It looks absolutely ridiculous.

Reply: The Amiable Librarian loves to agree with everyone; that is how the moniker "Amiable" was acquired. At the risk of offending you however, in this instance, the Amiable cannot agree. Students sometimes get tired, and thanks to the peace and quiet that normally pervades the library, they doze off. As long as you do not find them snoring, the Amiable hopes you will leave them undisturbed.

By the way, thanks for mentioning the magazine section. That is located on the main floor, behind all the photocopiers (which, based on previous experience, will be the topic of several questions to the Amiable Librarian this year). As you might expect, the magazine section contains many academic journals, as well as a small number of more popular titles such as Time, Newsweek, Maclean's and l'Actualite. Bet the students you see sleeping are holding one of these in their hands and have come to a section on how to reduce the national debt.

Grandma's Blanket

Lori Lentini
Staff writer

I cradle myself curled childlike
upon the damp sand,
wrapped in Grandmas blanket
wind blowing through my hair.

I remember when we sat here together, and you whispered eternity
in my ear.

We picked wild violets.
And I threw them
in your hair.
Samson with purple flowers in his mane.

Young women
turn your youthful eyes away from what your curiosity yearns.

For love will leave you
wrapped in Grandmas blanket
sitting on damp sand with the wind and the memories blowing through your hair.

Eye of Mortality

I am intruding here.
I am not part of this picture.
Nor do I have importance here.
But I am living and therefore one with what I am a witness to.

Small boy scales branches of bowed willow,
He is a fetus in her mighty womb of interwoven greenage.
He is a bird who dances
on her ancient limbs.

He is youth, who plunges headfirst
into the blackness.
Trusting a few feet
of water.
He has no fear of the unknown.

I would be jealous.
I should be jealous.
But I know only too well what lurks beyond.
There are rocks
Thou art mortal,
Beware.

The No-Look Walk-Fast

by Darren L.

Intimidated by the falsehood
I decline from the crowd
It started too small but has grown so loud
Everyone wants to prove themself
It's like a game - sometimes you win

* Is it wise to risk yourself
To be safe behind a grin
I don't want to be a pretender
Or a preacher
To be a part - losing Me
But if that's what you want
If that's what you'd like I'd rather be alone
And bound to the fright of losing You
I need You
I need Me
And I'm jealous
So torn - alone
So jealous
But I can't sacrifice who I've become
To reach and become what the crowd injects what the crowd expects
I mean ...
I need You
But, I need Me
You need You

The Fugitive

A none stop roller coaster ride, that puts you on the edge of your seat and leaves you there. This movie is truly suspenseful, witty, supremely clever and intelligent. Harrison Ford is Dr. Richard Kimble, a Chicago Vascular surgeon, wrongfully convicted for the murder of his wife (Sela Ward). He narrowly escapes one of the most spectacular train-bus collisions ever captured on the Silver Screen, finds his way back into Chicago; tired, broke, and running for his life, rents a room in a rundown, ramshackle building, retracing each event to find the real Killer. As if this wasn't enough, all the while eluding the efforts of Deputy U.S. Marshal Sam Gerard (Tommy Lee Jones).

There are no weak performances in this movie adaptation, of the 1960's TV series of the same name. Harrison Ford gives a tremendous performance as a man on the run and unjustly convicted. Tommy Lee Jones which everyone will remember from Segal's "Under Siege", walks away with this summer's best supporting actor. The beauty of this movie was the battle of brains and wit that allowed Kimble to be just one step ahead of Gerard. This is a believable movie and for an action film is surprisingly devoid of the usual gratuitous violence, and million dollar explosions were you leave the theatre and think to yourself, "Ya Hi, as if that really could happen?"

Everything in this film is probable, possible and fits together like a perfectly fit chain, one link at a time. The only downside to the movie for me is it wasn't long enough; sure they foreshadowed what would happen, but I was just so caught up in the movie I didn't want to leave.

Mother Love Bone - Self-Titled

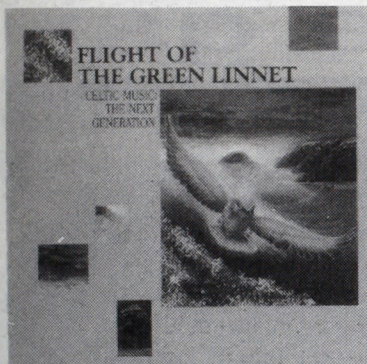

by The Prisoner of Reality

Mother Love Bone is one of the original Seattle bands. Along with Soundgarden and Pearl Jam, they were destined for greatness. Unfortunately, the lead singer, Andrew Woods, died of a drug overdose before the album could be released. According to the remainder of the band, this is a tribute to their friend and the time they had together. 17 tracks fill this 2-CD set and what a trip it is! Wood's vocal range is incredible; from caressing ballads to screaming raunchy anthems, he handles them all effortlessly. If you're a Seattle-scene fan, this album is a must.

Flight of The Green Linnet

by The Prisoner of Reality

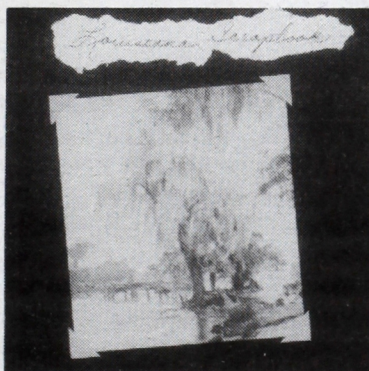

From Louisiana, we take a trip back through time to a land of dolmens, druids, magik and human sacrifices. This album is another compilation of traditional celtic music modernized. Most songs have a haunting quality supplemented with a rock beat. Sounds weird, I know, but it works! This would be good introduction for anyone not familiar with this style of music. Get a taste of Ireland anytime!

Louisiana Scrapbook

by The Prisoner of Reality

This 1987 Rykodisc release is an 18-tune celebration of what make Louisiana special. It's not your typical cajun or creole sampling. Bayou music has been given a modern twist. From the kicking jazzy "Mardi Gras in New Orleans" to the plaintif "She Said The Same Thing To Me" and "We Don't See Eye To Eye", this is a must for every music aficionado. The biggest treats on the album are the appearances by Buckwheat Zydeco and D.L. Menard, the Cajun Kings. Man oh man, pass the piquante sauce!

Have You Seen This?? NBC in the House

by Nell Craig
Contributor

You know me, or have a friend just like me. I can walk into any video store and scan the rows of movies mumbling....seen it, seen it, seen it...I can't find a video that I haven't already seen at the movies. "So what?" I'm not a REAL movie critic (i.e. Siskel & Ebert) but if I like a movie, you might like it too. "Why?" Because any movie I've seen (Action-Adventure, Comedy, Drama) falls into 1 of 3 ratings. 1) Must see 2) WFV - Wait for Video 3) STV - Straight to Video. If you know what movies your critic likes, you'll be semi-interested in what I have to say. Capiche? i.e. Love Connery, Hoffman, DeNiro and Jack, but have a soft spot for Beaches, Ghost, etc. (Did you say "Chick-flick"? I'll probably save the reputation of the guy your group sends down to the video store to rent a movie that "nobody has seen yet." ("Who the hell rented this shit?!") So! HAVE YOU SEEN STRIKING DISTANCE? Bruce (Death Becomes Her) Willis gets back into an action type role. Sarah Jessica (Honeymoon in Las Vegas) Parker joins in the fun. It's got more suspense than action (Not another Die Hard) and you don't know whats going on or who did what until the very end. Simple right? Must see.

HAVE YOU SEEN "THE PROGRAM"??

Hey, There's a River Under Sudbury!

by Bill the Cat

So here's the spiel. Last night I went to The Townhouse to see what I could see and what should I find but the Hard Rock Miners from Vancouver. Let me tell you, you missed out. The twenty or so regulars at this little club were treated to a night (two nights actually, but I missed the first night) of some of the finest rock-a-billy to come this way since The Razorbacks or Jerry Jerry and the sons of Rhythm Orchestra played here. The crowd was loud and the sound was crisp and booming. I had too much to drink in a short period of time which is now making me remember that I usually don't drink (THE POUNDING, PLEASE MAKE IT STOP!!).

As a little aside, if you are new to this town and you don't feel that you have been treated fair by the local entertainment scene then you should check out The Townhouse. The atmosphere is friendly (I haven't seen a fight there since Jim from The Walk got punched in the head, but that was one one knock and it was over with), the people there are cool about sitting back and relaxing or jumping around if the music is right. It's the only place in town that has regularly booked live music of any quality for the last couple of years. Somewhere along the line, however, people decided to go to the lights or backstreet to drink, get stupid, vogue and fight. Let me tell you a little about the lights and backstreet. They don't care about you, they just want your money, same goes for most of the other "entertainment" hotspots in this town.

The Townhouse consistently books bands like the Bourbon Tabernacle Choir, King Apparatus, King Cobb Steelie, The Look People, Roots Roundup, The Corndogs, Me, Mom & Morgentaler and local bands that don't have an agent but just want to play. To cut to the bone, it's a no bullshit place all around. There is always something different. The owner (Bernie) is real good to the bands, and a real hoot if there is enough people in his bar to ensure that he can pay his rent. He's kind of a different sort of proprietor in that he wants people to see quality stuff, as opposed to going to wet willies where they only want your money and your body.

Getting back to the Hard Rock Miners (this is a column about the Hard Rock Miners, you know) their originals were fun and they did the best rock-a-billy versions I've ever heard of Jesus Built My Hotrod and Enter Sandman. In talking to them afterwards they said that they would come back again and again if only for Bernie's Mom's home cooking (sorry folks, you have to be family or in a travelling band to find out what it's like, but let me tell you, if Bernie's mom and my mom went head to head, there'd be one hell of a battle and I think... oh nevermind).

Oh hell, this wasn't very interesting to read, was it. Well, how about this: FUCK! (oops, can I say that in a campus newspaper?). Hey, why don't we get into a heated debate about how every bar in this city is insulting to your intelligence (except the Townhouse and sometimes The "I"). Then after you have finally agreed with me, I'll buy you a beer at... well, you know where I'll be.

COMPLIMENTS OF:
FOOD SERVICES COMMITTEE

RECIPE All-in-One-Skillet Macaroni

Although I haven't used the term 'skillet' before, I thought 'All-in-one frying-pan macaroni' sounded dull. I think of this recipe as adventurous, since I discovered it while experimenting with the odds and ends in the cupboard and fridge. Dare to be delicious!

Preparation time: 25 minutes
Cooking time: 20 minutes Serves two

Heat in a frying pan over medium heat:
1 tbsp. (15 mL) oil

Add:
1/2 lb. (0.25 kg) hamburger
1 cooking onion, chopped
Fry until pink color is gone from the meat.

Drain.

Bring to a boil in a large pot over high heat:
3 cups (750 mL) water

Add:
1/2 cup (125 mL) macaroni
1/2 tsp. (2 mL) salt
a few drops of oil
Cook for 10 minutes or until macaroni is tender, stirring occasionally. Rinse and drain.

Combine in a small bowl:
1 tbsp. (15 mL) tomato paste
1/2 cup (125 mL) water
Add to meat.

Also add to meat:
1/2 cup (125 mL) celery, chopped
1/2 cup (125 mL) green pepper, chopped (optional)
the macaroni
Let cook over medium heat for about 15 minutes. Don't let the heat get too high because the tomato sauce will evaporate.

Add:
1/2 tsp. (2 mL) garlic powder
1/2 tsp. (2 mL) oregano
1/2 tsp. (2 mL) pepper
2 tsp. (10 mL) Parmesan cheese, grated
Cook for another 5 minutes. The celery and green pepper should be firm and crispy.

Don't Start Without:
skillet (frying pan if you wish) knife cutting board
large pot with lid large spoon measuring cup measuring spoons can opener
collander or strainer small bowl

Helpful Hints:
• It is important to drain the meat.
Greasy tomato sauce is not a pretty sight (or taste).

• Tomato paste and macaroni are two staples you should try to keep on hand for quick dishes like this.
• If you find the tomato sauce has drained away, add some water to the pan. It won't seriously dilute it.
• The drop of oil in the water prevents sticking.

Serving Ideas:
• As the title says, this is an all-in-one meal, so you really don't need anything else - except maybe seconds!

"Et ils n'ont qu'UNE chose en commun"

Norma MacRae-Ward
Agente, Harcèlement

Lorsque je m'adresse à divers groupes à l'Université et dans la communauté, c'est toujours ce que je dis - car c'est tellement vrai.

Le bureau de l'agente, d'harcèlement, célèbre son 4e anniversaire et des centaines de personnes sont déjà venues nous de-

"Mais ce n'est pas du harcèlement, bien sûr, car je suis trop vieux pour être harcelé."

mander de l'aide ou de l'information. Etc'est bien vrai: toutes ces personnes ont une seule chose en commun.

Ce n'est certes pas leur sexe puisque des hommes aussi bien que des femmes nous ont demandé de l'aide. Et ce n'est pas leur âge car j'ai parlé avec des personnes âgées de 18 à 63 ans. Il ne s'agit pas non plus de leur race, leur ascendance, leur lieu d'origine, leur couleur, leur origine ethnique, leur citoyenneté, leur croyance, leur orientation sexuelle, leur état matrimonial ou familial, ou un handicap: les victimes de harcèlement n'ont aucun de ces facteurs en commun.

Ce n'est pas ce que les gens croient lorsqu'ils songent au problème du harcèlement. Ils ont tendance à penser seulement à la victime stéréotypée: la belle jeune femme douce et simple, qui semble un peu naïve. Il est vrai que ce stéréotype fait régulièrement l'objet de harcèlement (c'est ainsi que l'on crée des stéréotypes), mais cela n'arrive pas uniquement à ce genre de personne.

Je pense, par exemple, aux cas (et il y en a eu plusieurs) d'étudiants qui se sont trouvés dans des relations auxquelles leurs partenaires refusaient qu'ils mettent fin. Ils ont été menacés sur le plan scolaire, émotionnel et physique - leurs cas sont réels et ils ont reçu de l'aide lorsqu'ils se sont présentés à notre bureau.

Plusieurs personnes (des deux sexes) qui avaient bien plus de 50 ans sont venues discuter d'un problème: "Mais ce n'est pas du harcèlement, bien sûr, car je suis trop vieux pour être harcelé." Ou encore, des étudiantes et étudiants viennent me parler et disent: "Je suis dans une situation troublante. Ce n'est pas du harcèlement car la personne n'a pas d'autorité sur moi - elle fréquente aussi l'université." Certains professeurs se sont présentés à mon bureau pour obtenir de l'aide. Il y a aussi des gens qui sont venus me dire, "Quelqu'un glisse des choses horribles sous ma porte et je ne sais pas qui - je n'ai rien fait à personne

"Je n'aurais jamais cru que j'aurais besoin des services du bureau responsable des cas de harcèlement."

et ça m'embête."

Cela ne manque jamais. Ce n'est pas toujours lors de la première visite ou du premier contact, et la formule n'est pas toujours la même, mais chaque personne a dit, "Je n'aurais jamais cru que j'aurais besoin des services du bureau responsable des cas de harcèlement." Mais cela

"Je suis dans une situation troublante. Ce n'est pas du harcèlement car la personne n'a pas d'autorité sur moi.- Elle fréquente aussi l'université."

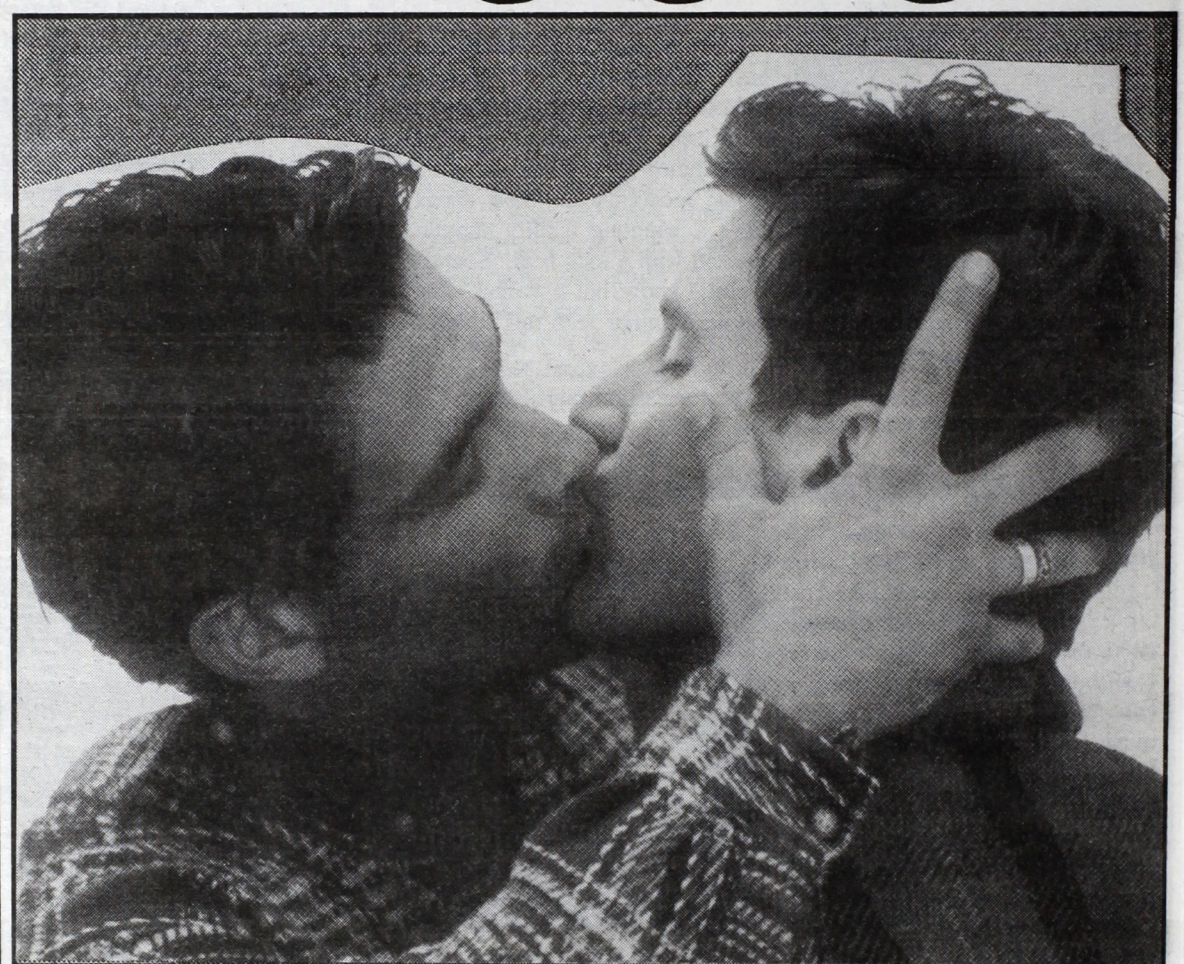

arrive - et à plusieurs personnes. Une partie de la prévention ou du traitement d'une situation de d'harcèlement consiste à reconnaître que cela peut arriver à n'importe qui. Personne n'est à l'abri. Cela pourrait vous arriver. Il est possible que cela vous soit déjà arrivé sans que vous ayez obtenu, ou pu obtenir, de l'aide. Ce n'est pas de votre faute.

Il existe une nouvelle politique sur l'harcèlement à l'Université Laurentienne; le document s'intitule "Politique touchant les harcèlements et procédures relatives aux plaintes". Vous pouvez obtenir plus d'information en composant le 675-1151 poste 3422.

Pédagogie gai

(Suite) Elissa Horscroft

Il serait impossible de décrire efficacement les sentiments des étudiant(e)s gais et lesbiennes. Cependant, imaginé, pour un instant si les rôles étaient renversés. Comment irait la vie d'un(e) étudiant(e) hétérosexuel(le) dans une société qui était principalement gay?

"Vous entrez en classe, comme d'habitude, et vous vous demandez s'il y a d'autres étudiant(e)s 'hétéro' dans votre classe. Vous croyez qu'il doit en avoir d'autres comme vous, tandis que les statistiques disent qu'il y a environ 10% des étudiant(e)s qui sont 'hétéro'. Personne ne parle des sujets 'hétéro' à l'exception en terme mythique 'eux' ou 'les autres'. Vous êtes entourés d'étudiants gais. Tout ce que vous lisez est gai. Chaque film que vous regardez, en classe, vous présentent des personnages gais qui parlent tous de leurs vies et de leurs problèmes. Personne dans votre classe s'est déclaré 'hétéro', probablement pour cause d'être fixé des yeux, d'être traité comme étant malade, d'être vu comme étant un pervers, d'être traité de toutes sortes de noms comme 'breeder' ou 'het', ou ils ont peur d'être tout simplement ignoré."

"Dans ton cas, tu es la seule personne hétéro dans la salle de classe, et le seul qui perçoit sa sexualité comme étant tendre, beau, chaleureux et aimable. Il n'y a personne à qui tu peux parler de cela, donc une partie de toi croit tout ce qui a été dit à l'égard des personnes hétéro - même si vous sentez que ça ne serait pas possible. Tout ce que vous savez c'est que vous avez un gros secret qui ne peut jamais être dévoilé. Vous devez jamais être pris au piège. Peut-être que vous vous cachez en gardant le silence. Peut-être que vous le cachez par d'autres moyens. Néanmoins, votre salle de classe demeure une expérience de masques, de secrets et d'identité secrète. Vous êtes et demeurez un aliéné de la société."

C'est l'une des premières expériences vécues par les lesbiennes et gais qui viennent d'arriver à l'université et qui s'attendent à une nouvelle liberté. Mais ce qu'ils (elles) vivent c'est une expérience universitaire d'isolement. Si l'on ignore les effets de la discrimination de l'hétérosexisme qui persiste dans les salles de classe, cette isolement persistera. Et les administrateurs et les autres dans les positions de pouvoir et de responsabilités continuent à ignorer ses problèmes, les universités continueront à servir seulement une portion de tout ceux qui sont enregistrés à l'université. La réalité de la magnitude de l'homophobie dans les salles de classe reflète une discrimination profonde des moeurs de l'institution entière. Avant d'éduquer les autres, nous devons nous éduquer nous-mêmes. Cette éducation débute avec la thèse que les gais ne sont pas le problème... l'homophobie est le problème.

Une recherche des étudiants à la Laurentienne est le sujet d'un atelier sur le SIDA

Gilio Brunelli

"Facteurs de risque face au SIDA et comportements sexuels des étudiants universitaires" est le titre d'une recherche menée conjointement par les Drs. Joseph Lévy et André Dupras, du département de sexologie de l'UQAM, et le Dr. Paul Cappon, Vice-Recteur à l'enseignement et à la recherche de l'Université Laurentienne.

Cette recherche se propose d'étudier certains comportements répandus dans la classe d'âge à laquelle appartient la majorité des étudiants universitaires, d'évaluer dans quelle mesure ils peuvent représenter des indices d'un comportement à risque face au SIDA et de comprendre les éléments psycho-sociaux qui peuvent motiver un changement dans ces mêmes comportements. Le but ultime est de contribuer à la mise en oeuvre de moyens de préventions du SIDA spécifiquement adaptés aux comportements de cette population.

Les étudiants de cinq universités - les quatre universités de Montréal et l'Université Laurentienne - ont participé à cette recherche, remplissant environ deux milles questionnaires.

À l'Université Laurentienne, la collecte des données s'est déroulée au printemps 1992 et a compté sur le travail de six assistants de recherche ainsi que sur la collaboration de plus de 500 étudiants, anglophones et francophones, qui ont accepté de répondre aux 226 questions du questionnaire. Le délai entre la collecte des données et la présentation des résultats s'explique en bonne partie par l'énorme masse de données qui furent ainsi récoltées.

Les thèmes du questionnaire sont très variés et comprennent des questions sur l'activité sexuelle, la perception du SIDA, la recherche de sensations fortes, la localisation du foyer de contrôle de la santé, l'anxiété face à la mort, la consommation de tabac, d'alcool et de drogues, les attitudes politiques, les attitudes face à la famille et bien d'autres thèmes. Ils sont précédés par des questions socio-démographiques, car on veut effectuer aussi des découpages selon certaines variables importantes comme le sexe, l'âge, la langue d'usage et le statut civil.

Tout cela doit permettre de vérifier un ensemble d'hypothèse - dix-sept - comme celle qui veut que les comportements sexuels à risque face au SIDA sont plus élevés chez les hommes que les femmes, ou encore que les comportements sexuels à risque sont accompagnés d'une utilisation plus grande de drogues, d'alcool et de tabac lors des activités sexuelles, ou qu'ils sont associés à une plus grande anxiété face à la mort.

Bien que l'analyse des données ne soit pas encore complètement terminée, on peut déjà signaler quelques indicateurs de risque face au SIDA:

1) la consommation de drogue et d'alcool lors des relations coïtales;

2) la présence ou l'absence de contrôle des impulsions sexuelles;

3) l'âge à la première relation coïtale, et 4) la recherche de sensations fortes.

Il reste à pondérer ces facteurs selon les variables d'âge, sexe, langue d'usage et statut civil pour avoir un tableau assez précis du comportement des différents groupes qui composent la population étudiante de l'Université Laurentienne. C'est ce que ces rencontres avec Joseph Lévy et Paul Cappon vont nous dévoiler.

Les résultats de cette recherche sont le sujet d'une présentation destinée aux étudiants le mardi 5 octobre à 15h à la salle d'études au Centre étudiant. Marcel Rouleau et Heather Bishop seront conjointement présidents du panel dont les membres sont: Dr. Joseph Lévy (Université de Québec à Montréal), Dr. Paul Cappon (Vice-Recteur académique), Dr. Edward Najgebauer (directeur, Services de santé), Dr. Ross Paul (Recteur).

Tout les étudiants et toutes les étudiantes sont invités à assister et nous espérons que vous serez là pour écouter et poser des questions.

En vedette cette semaine SE et CE. Avez-vous de la difficulté à déterminer si vous devez écrire SE ou CE? Si oui, lisez bien ce qui suit. SE est toujours, TOUJOURS placé devant un verbe réfléctif conjugué à la troisième personne du singulier. Par exemple: Elle se regarde dans le miroir.

CE est un pronom démonstratif qui est généralement sujet, donc il est placé devant le verbe d'où la confusion avec SE.

Un truc facile est de remplacer SE/CE par d'autres pronoms démonstratifs tels que ça, cela, celui-là, celle-là, ceux-ci, ceci, etc.

Exemple: SE/CE serait intéress-sant. Remplaçons SE/CE par cela et ça. Cela serait intéressant/ça serait intéressant. - Comme vous pouvez le voir, on peut remplacer se/ce par cela ou par ça sans échanger le sens de la phrase donc vous devez écrire ce.

Ce serait intéressant. De plus, le verbe serait, 3ième personne du condition-nel singulier du verbe être, n'est pas un verbe réfléctif donc nous avons ici une preuve supplé-mentaire qu'il faut employer ce.

Not just a shirt, but a game too

by Steve Martinovich
staff writer

Laurentian's athletic choices are growing daily. One of the new sports that one can indulge in is rugby. The first meeting and practice took place on September 21st at the Phys. Ed. Center where 35 people showed up.

Rugby, the game, originated in 1823 at Rugby School in England. The rules are deceptively simple, but in actual practice the game is quite demanding. The game is played by two teams of 15 people with a football. The field is 110 yards by 75 yards with an H-shaped goal at either end. Players may kick the ball or run with it in their hands, but cannot pass, throw or knock it forwards. Tackling is allowed and the scrums you see on TSN are a featured part of the game.

A team gets five points for trying to score a goal and gets two points for converting. Penalties given by the referee are played like a field goal in football with three points given in.

The president of the Rugby Club, Frank Schilte, states that there will be several tournaments and is hoping to have a home game played here at Laurentian University. In the works is a pub night and an expanded schedule.

Practices are every Tuesday and Thursday at 6:00PM on the football field at the Phys. Ed. Center until later this year when the time moves down to 5:30PM on the same days. If you are interested in joining the club, please contact Mike Preston at 688-1184 or Keith at 522-7705.

Future of Athletics Programs Decided

by Steve Martinovich
staff writer

Readers last year may remember the furor over the announcement that several athletics programs would be canceled. The following is the decision made by those in charge.

Women's indoor hockey and women's field hockey have been eliminated. Men's and women's curling have been eliminated. Men's ice hockey will be maintained as a varsity sport through this season, and may continue only after "...proven mechanisms in place (in January 17th, 1994) to produce an ongoing annual budget sufficient to support the team."

The following was added to the list of varsity sports, assuming they get past the budget process and receive the approval of the Board of Governors: Women's soccer will be added for the 1995-96 season and the team will be able to compete as a club for the 1994-95 season. Women's volleyball will be added after women's soccer. Finally, a full-time position of Associate Director of Intercollegiate Sports in charge of marketing will be created for this year.

As the acting sports editor, I can't help but editorialize. I laud the administration for adding women's soccer and volleyball, but I must reproach the school for placing the hockey program in a continual case of crisis. It would be nothing but a disgrace if a hockey program were to be lost at a northern Ontario university. I urge the administration at its earliest opportunity to rectify the situation. You invite little else but contempt if this situation is allowed to stand. Furthermore, to any students as concerned about this as I am, don't hesitate to talk to your SGA or AEF reps. Believe it or not, their jobs don't simply entail sitting in their offices between classes. Force them to raise the issue as well.
